THE DEBLOIS PAPERS.

- 429 DeBlois, Stephen, was, during the Revolution, a Royalist, or, as they were usually called at the period, a Tory. He left Boston early in the Revolution and resided abroad, in London, chiefly, for many years, leaving his wife at home to look after the interest of the estate. A number of his sons were merchants, in Europe and America, doing business in Boston, Washington and Georgetown, D. C. The papers are the business correspondence of an eminent merchant during the latter portion of the last century and the early part of this. Amongst the letters will be found the signatures of many persons, not without interest. Among them the Grays, William, — generally known as "Old Billy Gray," — the Codmans, the Hoopers, and others noted in their time. Papers relating to some military matters, and to various law suits. 89 pieces.

- 430 Dalton, Tristram. Tristram Dalton was related to, and intimately associated with, the DeBlois family. He was one of the commissioners appointed by General Washington to lay out the National Capital. Amongst these papers will be found many autograph papers from him and others, addressed to him, concerning matters in which he was much interested. One, addressed to him from Robert T. Hooper, in 1804, refers to his (Hooper's) apprenticeship, etc., and sarcastically gives to Mrs. Dalton — whom he says is a proud, haughty woman — an old grogam coat and breeches for her own use, "as the family may want them before I shall." Hooper takes occasion to complain that he was wronged in being accused of forgery. Few letters are quite so spicy, but there are many of interest in the lot, and some, doubtless, that the families would be most happy to suppress. This package is marked "business letters, etc., to T. Dalton and others, from 1792 to 1813. 36 pcs.
- 431 Another similar lot. 1785 to 1829. This package contains vouchers between the United States and different States for vast sums of money, — the family being conspicuous in many financial transactions in which the country and various states were concerned. Similar papers concerning the Emerys, the Butlers, the Youngs, and many others; commercial mercantile reports from Lisbon, early in the century, etc. One, a paper, concerning an immense lawsuit, — Williams vs. Dewer, Alexander Newcomb and Isaac Whipps. 60 pieces.
- 432 The same. Bills and receipts of Baltimore merchants, mostly of 1803.
- 433 Dalton, Tristram. Papers relating to an estate, managed by T. D. Many, with his autograph. 24 pcs.
- 434 Hodge, Capt. Michael, and Annie Sewall. Powers of attorney to act for Tristram Dalton. On the first day of September, 1872, in looking over the Dalton and Deblois papers, these two powers of attorney came to my attention for the first time, and the fact that they appear to have been executed just 100 years to a day from the date of that examination, struck me as a coincidence, singular in its character, and not unworthy of notice. 2 pcs.
- 435 The same. Papers in the settlement of an old estate, probate, administration, etc. — some bearing items. 69 pieces.

- 436 Another similar lot. One account of rations furnished to the marines, etc. 50 pcs.

- 464 Dexter, Lord Timothy. The original printed copy of his will, dated at Newburyport, March, 1799. Very rare.

ETHNOLOGY, NATURAL HISTORY, ARMS, CURIOS, ETC.

- 465 Hideous Mask, or Labret; wood, with teeth, trimmed with white hair, with grotesque carving. Curious, rare, and very old. From the northwest coast of America.
- 466 Paddle for a war canoe, capable of carrying a hundred men or more. These canoes are used on the northwest coast of America, near Behring's Straits. The material is of cypress wood, and extremely light. Length, 5 ft. 7 in.; width, 5½.
- 467 Another oar for a war canoe. Same model as the last, equally light but broader, and not so long; cypress wood. Length, 5 ft.; width, 6½ inches. Encircled by a guard for the hand.
- 468 Model of a northwest coast war canoe. Length about 6 ft., carved from a single log. Graceful and grotesque ornamentation in red and black.
- 469 Horse pistol, taken on board the British vessel "Guerriere," when captured by Commodore Hull. Originally it had a flint lock, since changed to a percussion, of London make, brass mounted and in good order. Length 12½ in. A rare relic of the war of 1812.
- 470 Naval revolvers, picked up on a Southern field after an action. Rifled barrels. Made by Remington & Sons, N. Y. Tarnished by rust, as found on the field. Brass trimmed, length 14 in. 2 pcs.
- 471 Single, rifle barrelled ship's pistol. In good order, 10 inches long. Taken from A. J. Francis, one of Mosby's scouts, after fatally wounding Geo. Ackerman, one of Hawkins' Zouaves, near Fredericksburg, Va.
- 472 A powder horn, carried in the Revolutionary War, and now filled with powder, as it was carried and left by a soldier at the time. Length 15 in.
- 473 An ancient powder horn of the French and Indian war, carried by Peter Stevens, who was killed with Wolfe at the siege of Quebec. Carried in the Revolutionary War by Oliver Sewell. Length 17 in.

- 474 Bayonet lance, sharp shaft of hard black wood. Japanese. Length 7 ft. 10 in.
- 475 Breech loading musket, of singular construction, and doubtless one of the earliest made. Bears an attachment intended to prove fatal in unqualified hands; liable to discharge backwards in the face of the finder. A very curious gun. Length 4 ft. 6 in.
- 476 A bomb gun, used for shooting whales. One or more of these guns, with an outfit of bomb lances, is regarded as indispensable in the pursuit of whales. The lance is thrown into the whale, charged with powder and missiles, the bursting of the bomb in the body of the animal, causes his destruction, and the immense evolution of gas prevents him from sinking. Length 3 ft., weight 20 lbs.
- 477 Bomb lance, for use in the implement last described. Length 18 in. Feathered with rubber wings.
- 478 Another, of large size, meant for a gun twice the size and weight of the foregoing. 24 in. long, feathered like the last.
- 479 Clapper of one of the nine bells of the chimes that used to ring in the old church of San Xavier, nine miles from Tucson, Arizona, one of the oldest churches in America. So long in use that the iron is entirely worn through, and is now supplied with raw hide. Sent to me from Dr. T. S. Hitchcock, of Omaha. He vouches for its ownership, declaring he knows it to be genuine because he stole it himself. Length 13 in., weight 3 lbs. Certainly a most interesting relic.
- 480 Pair of heavy Dutch Wooden Shoes. Coarse and rude, but said to fit the feet very easily. A pair.
- 481 An Indian Tomahawk. Old and of domestic manufacture. From the Wagman collection. Bought and returned by Mr. Bliss of Middletown, Conn.
- 482 Indian Tomahawk and Pipe combined. Doubtless French or English work; steel, with wooden handle. Length $9\frac{1}{2}$ in.
- 483 A rude Cross. Manufactured by the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico; taken from a native church. Ornamented with various colors in paint.
- 484 Indian Moccasins of native tanned buckskin, ornamented with beads and porcupine quills. A pair.
- 484a Indian Moccasins or shoes of light buckskin, handsomely embroidered with beads, and for ladies' wear.

- 484b Similar. White buckskin, with raw-hide soles. Clean and handsome pair.
- 485 Another pair. Buckskin, with quill ornaments, but minus the beads.
- 486 A Blackfoot Indian's Scalp, with long black hair, taken on the war path by an Assiniboin brave in June, 1881, at Wood Mountain, N. W. Montana. A horrible and ghastly trophy, with a portion of the scalp attached. From the Hedenberg collection.
- 487 Large Saddle Bags, much in use, and Cartridge Box, in good order. 2 pcs.
- 488 A Ram's Head. A cast of nearly the hardness of stone, a building ornament from an old store in Boston, modelled after the medieval.
- 489 Snow Shoes. A pair. A few years ago these objects were in common use in New England, and even now are not uncommon in Canada and the Northwest.
- 490 A Warming-pan. Another New England institution of the olden time. Brass, handsomely ornamented, top perforated, has long wooden handle. Extreme length 45 in., diameter across the pan 12 in. A fine and scarce object, now much sought for.
- 491 A Hindoo idol, sculptured in alabaster, of native work, height 15 ins., base 10 in. broad.
- 492 A pair of dancing slippers, pink kid, worn in Boston in the first of the century. Made by Pelatiah Rea.
- 493 Another dancing slipper of green kid, worn by a Boston beauty of the period, high heel and long pointed toe.
- 494 Matate of Lava, made by the Indians in Mexico. Used for grinding corn for frijoles. On account of the immense amount of dead flies used in domestic Mexican cookery, this instrument is usually called by the Yankees a "fly crusher."
- 495 A Bassoon, formerly more in use than now, indeed, it is now but rarely seen. A curiosity, not quite perfect. Length 49 in.
- 496 Mojave bow, end broken. Length 46 in.
- 497 Turkish pipe stem, with ivory ornaments. Length 40 in.
- 498 Thistle puller, a curious agricultural implement. Made to eradicate Canadian thistles from the earth. Funny implement from the Wagman collection. Length about 4 ft.

- 499 Large lock taken from the Eustis house. Built early in the 18th century by Wm. Shirley, provincial governor of Mass. Bay, and commander of the British forces in North America, and projector of the conquest of the French dominions in America. With heavy iron key, complete. Large enough to close a bank or stop a canal.
- 500 Another, of similar description.
- 501 Another of the same. These locks were all hand made and brought here when the house was constructed.
- 502 Cane, turned from a rafter of English oak, taken from the Shirley House. The house was inhabited by the Governors of Massachusetts and their descendants for a large portion of two hundred years, including Shirley, Hutchinson, and Eustis.
- 503 Spears of dense, hard wood, may have been used as arrows. From the South Seas. 6 pcs.
- 504 Canteen used in the Confederate Army.
- 505 Rebel Sword, bearing the Toledo inscription, "Draw me not without reason," "Sheath me not without honor"; fine steel. 45 in.
- 506 Pipe Pouch. Indian tanned buckskin ornamented with beads, fringe, and porcupine quills; fine. 3 ft. 5½ in.
- 507 Olive-wood Cane Heads. From the Mount of Olives. 2 pcs.
- 508 Lead bolas for throwing at, and entangling, cattle and horses. 3 pcs.
- 509 Box, or drinking cup of bark, Central America.
- 510 A large chest, once the property of Gen. John Burgoyne. Brought by him from England in 1777, and captured at his surrender in that year. A most interesting historical relic, and of undoubted authenticity. Formerly the property of Capt. Ward, of Gen. Schuyler's body guard; at his death left to his son David Ward, and purchased from him many years ago by Mr. Henry Wagman. Sufficiently large to contain the uniform and the wardrobe of a British major general. An unique and valuable article. 49 x 18 x 19.
- 511 Tooth of a sperm whale 6 in. in length.
- 512 Tusk of mastodon, California. Has been exposed to the heat in burnt ground, whereby the ivory has been much injured. Length, 39½ in.; diameter, 6½ in.; weight, 43 lbs.
- 513 Iron cast of a soapstone vessel. 9 by 6.
